

You're late for your Christmas presents too ?

Yeah you can be running late finding all the Christmas presents of your shopping list and still buy eco-friendly.

Here are some ideas to spare you the use of Amazon.

➤➤ I'm looking for video games

You want to offer the ps5 to your niece but you're a responsible citizen and you won't gather with your family this year ? Opt for dematerialized ! A video game you bought on an online store contributes to about 95% less CO2 emissions than a physical game.

➤➤ I'm looking for electronics

If you don't trust ebay, you'll find everything under warranty at Cash Express (quality vinyl turntables starting at 39€, reflex and analog cameras, keyboards and many other wonders) plus there are stores in a hundred of cities.

➤➤ I'm looking for fooodoooood

Prefer local goods ! As a reminder, producing 100g of chocolate releases 5kg of CO2 emissions and more than 14% of the workers of this industry are children. Better pick marrons glacés instead (they're traditional candied chestnuts).

➤➤ I'm looking for household appliances

ENVIE renews and sells domestic electronic appliances under warranty at attractive prices while promoting professional reintegration. Otherwise, you can repair your device in a nearby Repair Café (map below) and buy something fun.

➤➤ I'm looking for clothes

Europeans get rid of 4 million tons of fabrics every year and globally buy 20% more clothes they keep half as long than 20 years ago. Which means second-hand selling places like Vinted, the Red Cross stores or Emmaüs overflow with good quality clothes waiting for you.

➤➤ I'm looking for toys

Every week, we already eat an average of 5g of plastic, that is the equivalent of a credit card. Avoid intoxicating your little brother, choose wood over plastic!

➤➤ I'm looking for cosmetics

Over a hundred of brands tested by 60 million customers in 2020, 2/3 contain harmful substances (allergenic, endocrine disruptors). Mademoiselle Bio on the contrary only sells organic products at affordable prices.

If you're still lacking of inspiration, here are two alternative online sellers to Amazon where scrolling might give you ideas: dreamact.eu and fr.cocote.com/

And if you really really want to buy on Amazon, don't forget to install the CarbonCroc extension which was conceived by 42 students. It compensates for the carbon footprint of your purchases (and now of your Tweets) by planting trees.
